

Beckford Nature Reserve

In accordance with our three year maintenance plan, we are at present coppicing some of the alders and willow trees on the island. This will let in more light to improve the botanical diversity of the habitat. Wood from the work will be stacked and left to decay in order to encourage and protect the invertebrates; the brash will be left in heaps to provide a home in the spring for birds and insects.